YOUTH AND AGE.

When I was young! Ah woeful when!
Ah for the change 'twixt now and then!
This breathing house not built with hands,
This body, that does me grievous wrong.
O'er aery cliffs and glittering sands
How lightly then it flashed along!
Like those trim skiffs, unknown of yore,
On winding lakes and rivers wide;
That ask no aid of sail or oar,
Naught cared this body for wind or weather
When Youth and I lived in't together.

Flowers are lovely, Love is flower-like,
Friendship is a sheltering tree,
O the joys that came down shower-like,
Of Friendship, Love and Liberty,
Ere I was old!

Ere I was old! ah, mournful ere,
Which tells me, Youth's no longer here!
O Youth! for years so many and sweet,
'Tis known that thou and I were one—
I'll think it but a fond conceit;
It cannot be that thou art gone!
Thy vesper bell hath not yet toll'd;
And thou wert aye a masker bold.

What strange disguise hast now put on,
To make believe thou art gone?
I see these locks in silvery slips,
This drooping gait, this altered size;
But springtide blossoms on thy lips,
And tears take sunshine from thine eyes!
Life is but thought! so think I will,
That Youth and I are housemates still!

BETWEEN THE TIDES.

A flawless day was the 23d of April in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and seventy-nine. The regulation morning breeze had been lured into the poppy fields of Angel Island, and put to sleep by the narcotic kisses of Circle And even the Zephyrs—gentle pages to the ers-while brawlers—had been shut up in the weather clerk's aignal-box until 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Then the yachts came out, and the Zephyrs were released. It was not very good weather for sailing that the Zephyrs made, though they blew till their rosy cheeks were like soap bubbles, and the white sails were filled with scented breath. The lumbering schooners staggered in zigzag pathways, as if they meant to slice away the island noses with their dull prows; and, indeed, the yachts sailed scarcely any faster, only the little plungers made unchecked headway, running at their own sweet will, it seemed. The north harbor was dotted with sails. Everybody and everybody's wife and children and friends were out. So there there was nothing strange about the mere presence of a young man and a young woman in a small rowboat amid the scene of lazy commerce and busy gayety. Certainly it was not strange, for there were a hundred other people out that afternoon in rowboats, to say nothing of the professional boatmen, the men with sculls and the rowing clubs. If the people on the yachts which they met noticed them, they doubtless viewed them with pity mingled with contempt, or else looked at them artistically, and thanked God for poverty and the picturesque.

As for the couple in the boat, they did not notice anything but each other—at least except as the young man found it necessary to change his direction in rowing to avoid being run down. After a while even this became unnecessary. They were rowing with the ebb tide, and after they had passed the newly-finished bit of sea-wall east of the old Meiggs wharf, the channel was comparatively clear. It was then about half-past three.

"Let us float," said the young man; "pretty soon the tide will turn; then we will turn."

"Very well, Tom," said the young woman.

Really, she was as yet a girl. She could not have been more than nineteen. Her figure was slight, but indicative of rare gracefulness. Her face was not pretty—that is, most would not think it pretty. Both mouth and nose were large. Her eyes were blue and held an odd look—half earnest, half careless—difficult to define, yet impossible to disregard. It was a striking face, almost fascinating, withal a good face—a face in which heart showed first and intellect afterward.

The man was, exteriorly, commonplace. You might take a description at random from your scrap book of conventional current fiction, and it would be likely to do him more than justice. But what of that. She was "Laura" and he was "Tom!"

They had been talking gayly ever since they left the landing at the foot of Washington street. When Tom spoke they had apparently reached some common and very satisfactory conclusion, for she looked very happy, and she said tenderly—for she had a sweet, low voice, tunable as a perfect bell or a wave sob:

"You will ask her to-morrow, Tom?"

"Yes, Laura, or to-night, if you like."

"She will look at you wild-eyed and perhaps scold you a bit."

"Oh, I am not afraid. How could I be with such a prize to gain?"

They had passed the point, the swimming beach, the Presido; they were nearing the fort at the gate. A sudden swirl in the current twisted the bow of the boat sharply around. Tom had been leaning forward, the better to talk to Laura, the more easily to hold her hand, perhaps. As the boat shifted its direction, he instinctively reached for the oars. His hands touched the empty rowlocks. The oars were gone. He looked around, but they were nowhere to be seen, A cry of horror rose to his lips. Luckily he stilled it there. He looked quickly, furtively at his companion. She had seen and understood. He forced a laugh, and his companion was deceived by it.

"Then it was not so very bad?" she said, and the color came back to her cheeks.

"No, it is a good joke, he replied. "Only we will be out rather late. When the the tide turns we will go back booming."

Really he had very little hope. His judgment told him that the tide had not yet turned, and unless it did turn almost instantly, the swift current would carry them out into the offing, and amid the breakers at the bar, where their frail boat would not live an instant. And then——. He could not swim a stroke. If he could, the distance to the shore was too far to make that of any use. If only they had a rudder they might run the boat ashore; but, unfortunately, they had been in time to secure only the very last, rudderless skiff. "Thank the fates it does not leak." "Does not leak?" He looked down, and, and saw that the irregular bottom of the boat was covered with water to the depth of almost half a foot. When they had started away from the pier landing Tom had braced his feet against a broad cross-cleet, and and Laura's stout boot rested on the same dry foothold. Until then neither had noticed the water.

Tom had searched the bottom of the boat for a bailing-can. He could not find one. Laura moved so as to look in the little locker under the stern seat. There was no can there.

"What shall we do?" she said.

"I must bail with my hat," he replied slowly, as if thinking it out; "the water must come in very slowly, it is a long time since we left Washington street wharf." He looked at his watch; it was then past four and they were nearly opposite Fort Point. So far as they could see there was not a single sail in the offiing: They looked back at the city; there were no out-coming tugs or steamers, or schooners even. Then they looked out through the gate and wondered.

There is an untranslatable poetic something about our Golden Gate that the sympathetic beholder, incoming or outgoing, or gazing upon it from any standpoint, never fails to realize—something which, perhaps, he acknowledges, but may never put into fitting phrases. Perhaps it is because it seems so to hold the keys of our California life, that we may not dissociate it from either our history or our future. Perhaps it is because in looking at it one can never quite discern its big beyond, of weal or of woe, of sunshine or of tempest.

"We should never have had this sunset anywhere else, Laura," and Tom pointed to the declining sun, hanging without a cloud above the wilderness of waves. They looked back at the city, and all the western windows were aflame.

"I did not think there was so much gold in 'Frisco," said Tom.

"Oh, Tom, I don't want to die and leave it all," said Laura, tremblingly.

The dallying breeze had shaken off the spell. The air had grown suddenly chill. Far ahead they could see the ominous white of the careening swell, and long the shore they heard the dull boom of the surf. Lower and lower sank the white, electric dazzle; buff and pink, and orange toning into narrow belts of opal. Right ahead rose the black Farallones, and as the sun still sank lower, they stood out in unkroken outline against the disk.

With his soft hat Tom made slow progress in bailing. Until then the water had oozed in so slowly that danger from leakage had not alarmed him until then; the current, too, had carried them along so gently that the danger of upsetting had not presented itself. But after they passed the fort the motion of the waves changed, not suddenly but gradually, until at last the boat was rocking like a cedar chip in the eddies of a millrace. And still the tide had not turned.

Ceasing his bailing for an instant, Tom thought he heard the sound of water trickling into the boat. Perhaps it was his instinct of danger and not his ears that warned him, for the waves were splashing against the outside, and the motion caused a constant lapping of the water within the boat. Tom made a careful examination, and at last found a hole through which the water poured in a fitful stream as to the boat rocked from side to side.

"I must stop that leak," he said. "Can you bail?"

The sun had set, and the flush was fading out of the western sky. Laura took one long look around. In all the waste of waters there was no moving object. If there had been a ship in sight she could have seen it, she thought, almost despairingly.

She began to bail as well as she could, with the felt hat, and in her cramped position. A long line of gray was coming up from the south.

"It is fog," said Tom, whisper.

Until he said, "it is fog," she did not realize the almost utter hopelessness of their position. Even if the bar, it would be impossible to protect themselves in a fog. For a moment she thougt she should quite break down, the fate before them seemed so terrible. Tom had succeeded in stopping the leak, and had resumed bailing. To make that task easier, he had cut the brim from his hat. The fog was now all around them, and it was quite dark. They thought they heard the surf more distinctly.

"The tide has turned," said Tom.

And so it had, but just how they would be affected by the change they could not tell. Tom kept on bailing until the amount of water had materially decreased. They had not spoken to each other for some moments. At last Laura leaned forward. Her hand touched Tom's, and he took it in its own. That hand-clasp meant to them things unspeakable. Her hand was very cold, almost as cold as his own. In his pocket was a silk handkerchief; he handed it to her, and bade her tie it about her neck, for he dared not rise to fasten it there himself. Then he took both her hands between his own striving to keep them warm.

Laura was the first to speak, and her voice was quite firm, scarcely even sorrowful: "Tom, dear, I do not want to die; and yet death cannot take from us the boon of having died together."

"But we shall not die now, Laura; I know we'll not." There was the ring of conviction in his tones. The profound resignation underlying her words had struck the right key in his own nature, and the thought of his first despairing mood made him almost angry. "But it's awfully hungry we are, my dear," were his next words.

"I'm ashamed of you," said Laura, and she actually laughed. Tom laughed also.

When two persons in such a position can laugh, it is either "very brave" or "very shocking," according to the creed we first sucked and the "so forth" of our salad days.

The fog was all around them and neither could see the other's face. The fog was cold, and from time to time Laura had shivered once or twice, audibly, though quite involuntarily, for she was a brave little woman. When the ripple of the young girl's laughter rang out amid the fog (above the boom of the surf, the far away barking of the sealions on Seal Rocks, and the near, yet distant screams of the fog signal), and when his own laughter was smothered in the fog folds, Tom repeated: "But I am hungry, awfully——"

What he might have gone on to say is forever sealed. The next moment the boat struck something with great momentum, and that is all Laura remembered till she woke in the queer little cabin of the Sarah Emma, brigantine, inbound from Australia.

A woman's gentle face bent over her own in anxious, motherly regard, and dear Tom sat on a locker behind the gangway, with glad tears in his eyes to see the color steal back to her cold cheeks.

"And now you must have a bit to eat," said the captain's wife, in hospitable accents.

But Laura shut her eyes, half maliciously, and murmured: "Give it to him please; he's always hungry."

"That's what you'll not dare to say when you become Mrs. Tom," said the young man, triumphantly; and as the matronly figure of the captain's wife disappeared in the shadow of the gangway, he kissed her shut eyes softly, and turned away.

Through the Rapids.

There are two rival lines of steamers on the St. Lawrence this year, which run through the Thousand Islands, down the rapids to Montreal. One of these, the Canadian Royal Mail Line, which has been in existence for a year, runs from Hamilton to Toronto, touching only at American line has been started with one steamer, the Rothesay, which runs from Cape Vincent to Alexandria Bay, and thence on to Ogdensburg and Morrisburg. At the latter place, which is eighteen miles below Ogdensburg, a transfer of passengers is made to a smaller steamer, for the purpose of running the rapids on the way to Montreal.

Great rivalry exists between these two lines. Last Tuesday the Royal Mail Line steamer Spartan started from Prescott on her trip down the river. Shortly after the Rothesay of the American Line left Ogdensburg. The Rothesay was perhaps two miles behind the Spartan. At Ogdensburg or Prescott the current proper of the St. Lawrence begins. Both boats dashed along under full steam. Before long it was evident that the Rothesay was gaining. However, she did not fully approach till just at the commencement of the rapid Deflau, some seventy-two miles below Ogdensburg. Common prudence would have caused the captain of the Rothesay to slacken speed till the rapids were passed. But, no! steadily the steamer went ahead, until she came abreast the Spartan and but a few feet distant, when conversation was carried on between the passengers. The current at this point is very swift, and the channel narrow, tortuous and full of dangerous rocks. The current pushed both boats together till the paddle boxes touched and thus joined together the two boats passed down the rapids. At one moment the rapids, pressing the bows in together, would careen the boats outward, till it seemed as if they mast capsize, and then the noise of the rudder chains and the chafing of the boats impressed one with the idea that two monsters were locked in a death grapple. Several passengers fainted away and all were terribly frightened. Neither boat was able to draw away from the other, and thus fastened they ran the rapids for four miles. Then the Rothesay, with her wheels stopped, and her side all staved in, floated to one side and steered into the port of Morrisburg.

Fishing in the Red Sea.

All the islands in the Red Sea, with the exception of Noorah, Great Harnish, and Dallace, are barren rocks, uninhabited and without water. Three or four of the largest, between Akabah and Jiddah, are generally taken possession of during the pilgrim season by water carriers, wood cutters, and fishermen from the main land. They erect temporary habitations for themselves and families, and chiefly live on fish which abound along the coast. They catch the fish by nets, hooks, and spears; but the turtle they generally catch while asleep on the waters, which they accomplish by suddenly turning it upon its back. However, should the turtle be disturbed before capture, and disappear beneath the water, it seldom escapes its pursuers. The turtle is both a slow and awkward swimmer, and is quite defenceless, even in its own element, when attacked by an expert diver. Each fisherman carries a large net, made of strong twine, to which is attached a long rope about twenty feet in length. With this net in his left hand, and a short spear in his right, the fisherman dives, pursues, and generally overtakes the turtle which he manages to entangle in the net, and at once hauls it to the surface. In this manner they capture thousands; but they are not so valuable as an article of food as those procurable in the Mediterranean or West Indies. They are caught for the value of their shell, which has become a great article of commerce between the Red Sea, Ceylon, and Europe. The native turtle of the Red Sea and Levant, when fully grown, generally weighs from one hundred and fifty to two hundred pounds. The Arabs on the shores of the Red Sea, having never found a dead one, seriously believe that the turtle species are endowed with everlasting life. It is stated as a matter of certainty that the turtle lives over two hundred years. In bringing forth its young, nature has taught it to take the same advantage of the sand and sun as the ostrich in the desert. The female turtle generally selects a soft, sandy spot on shore, beyond the reach of the tide, where she makes a hollow nest, in which see deposits between one hundred and twenty and one hundred and fifty eggs, which she covers with sand; and then, like the lazy and selfish cuckoo, she abandons her offspring forever. The turtle and land tortoise are of the same family, for they can both live in close confinement without food for a period of from twenty-five to thirty days. When this process is adopted in their shipment from their native seas to Europe, they become very weak and lean, and many of them die on being restored to their liberty.

Hand Painting Dresses.

The application of hand-painting to accessories of dress is daily gaining fresh importance. The latest novelty is painting on the corner hem of China silk handkerchiefs. These small pocket foulards are made in Paris of plain red, blue, or ecru for the centre; around this a figured hem is stitched, and this is of printed silk, but the four corners are always of the same color as the centre On one of these corners comes the painting by hand. The subjects are very decorative; there are birds of paradise in a tangle of exotics; chariots drawn by swans or dolphins, and plenty of white foam splashing up and even to the centre part of the foulard climbing plants that form a mass of bright color on the corner hem, and that diminish as they taper up to the centre; Venus rising from the waves and holding above her head a shell, in the midst of which was a large shining pearl. It is the proper thing to exhibit the painted corner. This decoration does not exclude a worked crest and monogram, executed in embroidery on an opposite corner, but not on the hem. A handkerchief of the kind here described costs in Paris from fifteen to eighteen francs. The artist gains from five to ten francs for each subject. I is not supposed easy to finish two in one day, as the painting is as fine as minature; but even should three be got through in two days, this is not despicable employment, and ladies might endeavor to introduce this novelty at home. There also are exhibited new perfumed sachets to be laid on the centre of quilts and smaller pocket sachets, now used for cardeases and photos, instead of the stiff leather and pasteboard, ivory, or tortoise-shell pocket cases of the past. These sachets owe their success to a fragrance with which the linings and the inside are impregnated. It is so lasting that a coat front retains the mild perfume long after the sachet has been removed. Sachets are also painted on the outside by hand: they have two pockets, one under each cover; these and the inner flaps are outlined with silken cord. Another suggestion for the industrious is the application of embossed designs applique on the quarters of velvet parasols. They are of stamped satin, tacked on all round the contours with stitches that disappear under a thin silken cord, which is guided round over the first tackings on.

We can never have much confidence in the uprightness of others until we have discovered some degree of uprightness in ourselves.

Home Dressmaking.

Now that lace, for trimming all kinds of material, is having its day again after long disuse, people who have ancient, lace-bedecked finery laid away, will do well to resurrect the obsolete garments, and rip off the trimmings to use again. No feature of white lace is more highly valued than the peculiar creaminess which is given by age; so it is no matter if a score of years has passed since it saw the light—if time has spared its strength, it is all the more desirable for the use of to-day. It is not a very long time since imitation laces found no market in America. Our English sisters have ornamented their pretty evening dresses with them freely for the last half-dozen years, but here we have eyed them with scorn and suspicion, till of late, imported dresses of undoubted style converted us to their use. This summer dealers offer us fully twenty-five varieties of imitation lace, many of them exceedingly pretty, and some expensive enough to demand consideration from those whose admiration for an article is governed by its cost.

A dress worn at a Saratoga hotel by one of the visitors in race week recalls a hint for making such a dress, given a long time ago in these articles. The present fancy for lace makes the idea even more worthy of attention than when first mentioned. While the slight cost of the costume, as made at home will be its reccommendation to economists, there is no reason to believe that the dress which was admired at the watering place was inexpensive; on the contrary, the probability is that it was imported for the wearer. The dress was made of white Brussels net, it was once called, but the nearest approach to the fabric sold as such then is now the fine mosquito lace, not the coarse stuff with the square bar, but a net with mesh, like in kind, but not size, to the cane seats of chairs. The overskirt was darned in a showy pattern, such as is frequently seen upon tidies, with linen thread. The back of the skirt was covered with three wide ruffles of the lace, bordered with a darned pattern, and the lowest ruffle extended all around the bottom of the dress. The waist was thickly covered with stripes in the darning stitch representing inserting, and the sleeves were decorated in the same way. The underdress in this case was of white Surah satin, sleeveless and low square neck, but any old white or pale evening silk dress could be worn in its place; even a very indifferent silk could be used without its defects being perceptible through the ruffling and figuring of the lace. Darned tidies are so easy to make, and have been for a long time such a popular style of fancy work, that most young ladies have had some experience in that line, and if a handsome evening dress happens to be the desire of any young lady's heart, she will not shrink from the labor involved in getting up a dress like the one described. The cost will be next to nothing, if the edge of the overskirt is finished by deep scallops run with several rows of linen, and a deep hem turned on the bottom of the ruffles just below the darned border. Countless yards of ruffled lace added to the dressiness of the costume just described, but to many tastes the simplicity of the finish just suggested would give the dress a charm besides making it much easier to wash if it ever needed to pass through that process, which is doubtful, as lace does not catch dirt as easily as other fabrics.

French writers predict a reentrance into fashion of striped materials. They were considered out of date last season, and merchants reduced the prices of those on hand so much that some great bargains are still to be secured. Shoppers with slender purses would do well to avail themselves of some of these opportunities, as some very durable and excellent goods are being sold at the bargain counters, to leave room for new fall stock. It is the habit of many experienced housekeepers to make most of their purchases between seasons. The opportunity for choice is small, but compensation for that lies in the prices, which are far below those of new goods. Black silks have been out of favor for the last few years, in consequence of the popularity of satins and brocades, but there is no danger of their staying out of style any great length of time, and now is the time to purchase them, for both the French and those of American manufacture are being sold very cheaply. A black silk dress is always handsome and desirable, and for people who rarely buy a rich dress, and must of necessity make that dress last forever, there is nothing to equal a black silk, for it goes triumphantly through the changes of fashion as no other garment can. Even if more showy styles prevail, the wearer of a well made black silk dress can be certain, under all circumstances, of being ladylike in appearance.

This is a time when dressmaking is at rather a standstill in most families, and people are generally at leisure to do other things. In houses where ready-made underclothes are not the rule, the time can be well applied to replenishing the stock. Better cloth is usually put into the homemade garments, and where nightgowns and chemises have given away at the yokes and sleeves, the lower portions will be worth making up into children's under-garments.—Dressing sacks or sacks to wear in sickness can also be made from the skirts of worn-out night-dresses, and there are various uses which can be made of half-worn underclothes in families where a sewing machine is used. Of course it would not pay to spend time in sewing by hand upon any but new muslin.

Another economy that may be new to some people, is making pillow cases from the corners of worn out sheets. There will be more seams than is quite orthodox in such pillow covers, because the centre piece on each end is generally too thin to be avsilable, and cutting it out, necessitates a join of the pieces. Where old linen pillow cases are good at the corners, small square napkins for washstands, bureaus and toilet tables, can be made by raveling out a deep fringe. It will be beautifully soft and silky on coarse, old linen, and working an open button-hole stitch all around, in colored crewel, to keeping it from farther raveling. If the linen is worth it, a letter, or little figure, can be put in the centre in outline stitch, with crewel or indelible silk. Useful table napkins for every day can be made from the corners and sides of worn out tablecloths, and it would be well not to consign the worn out centres to the rag bag, but keep them in the bag or box, which in every family should be appropriated to old linen and cotton, to be ready for any emergency. Bandages and strings of the right sort, physicians say, are seldom at hand in private houses when accidents demand their use, but they should be ready, even if there seems but little possibility of their being used.

"No—Good Day."

Half an hour before the Pacific express left for the West yesterday morning a big giant of a chap, lugging a satchel in one hand and leading a big dog with the other, entered the depot, followed by a clean-faced, tidy-looking man with a grab-bag and an umbrella. Both reached the ticket office at the same time, and while the giant inquired the price of a ticket to some point in Kansas the other laid down the cash for a trip to Jackson.

"Thunder and blazes and wild cats!" shouted the giant as he learned the price of a ticket—"why, I hain't got no such money?"

"Can't help it—regular rate," said the ticket seller.

"And extra for the dog?"

"Yes."

"I'll be hanged if I pay it!"

"Very well," and down went the window.

"Say, mister!" called the giant as he beckoned to the man ticketed for Jackson—"say, see here."

"What can I do for you?" asked the other as he came up.

"Say, I want to go to Kansas."

"Yes."

"And I haven't got quite 'nuff money. I'm bound to go, fur I've left home and sot out, and I must raise some more money. Say, do you ever carry a revolver?"

"Never."

"Well, you orter," he said as he pulled out an old navy and worked the cylinder around. "Times is mighty scrumpshus jist now, and every man orter protect his life. I'll give you this old barker for seven dollars. I'll warrant it to shoot blazes out of a hoss thief twenty-six rods away."

"My friend, I am a minister of the Gospel, and I never have use for such weapons."

"Preacher, eh? Say, I'll knock off a dollar on the price. Say six and take it."

"It would be useless to me."

"Useless? Say, suppose you are going home from prayer-meeting and some rough tackles you? Click! click! biff-bang! and whare is your rough? You may get into a dispute over at the church with one of the deacons. He thinks he has the dead wood on you as he peels his coat, but you keerlessly draw this out and wipe your nose on the barrel, and whar's your deacon?"

"Oh, but I do not want it at any price. I should never sleep easy if it was in the house, even."

"Then take this 'ere," said the man, as he drew out a buck-handled knife with a blade a foot long. "She don't burn any powder nor make any noise, but she's chuck-full of business."

"My friend, a preacher does not want such weapons as that."

"They don't eh? S'posen you were over to the hoss-race and a crook smashed your plug hat down your shoulders? S'posen some feller comes along and spits on yer boots? Say, I'll part with this 'ere home-defender for $5, though she cost me 'leven and I never stabbed but one man with 'er."

"I couldn't—couldn't think of it. As I told you before I am a clergyman and have no use for weapons."

"Say, take the dog! A preacher can't be throde over the bar for keeping a dog, and if you're looking fur sunthin' about four times as wicked as a b'ar-trap here's the anamile. Say——"

"I do not want a dog.

"Don't? Great hooks! but do you let tramps git outer your yard with two hull legs? Do you drive hogs outer your garden with switches? Say, I'll part with old Typhoon for $18, and I'll swear on four Bibles that I've been offered $25 more'n a dozen times."

"No—no. I should not know what to do with him. I hope you'll get to Kansas, but—"

"I'll say $15, though it's a burnin' shame."

"No."

"I'll say $12, if you'll agree to keep still about it."

"No; that's my train and I must be going. I hope—."

"Say, I'll sell ye a recipe to tame a b'ar. I've tried it, and if it don't tame him higher'n a kite in a week I'll chaw sand."

"No—no—good day."

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic State Convention met at Williamsport, Wednesday the 28th instant. The convention was called to order at noon by Chairman Dill, of the state central committee, and the following officers were appointed: Sergeant-at arms, H. S. Lucas, Michael Sullivan, Joseph J. King; Doorkeepers, J. O. Pratt, Geo. J. Akers, John Marley, A. Cassidy, S. Scott and S. McKean.

The proceedings were opened with prayer by Caleb U. Wright, delegate from Bucks county. The following secretaries were announced: Wm. McClellan, George D. Herbert, W. F. McCully, William Hasson, William R. Stover, George B. Kneass, Alexander Russell, E. M. Haldeman and J. Milton Hall.

The roll of delegates was then called and credentials were presented.

On motion of Mr. James, of Northampton, W. U. Hensel, of Lancaster was unanimously chosen temporary chairman. He was escorted to the chair by Jacob Zeigler and J, V. Crackoft. He was greeted with the most hearty applause. Mr. Hensel, on taking the chair made a very sound and stirring speech.

The committee on organization reported through their chairman Col. Duff, to make the temporary chairman permanent. They also decided to have a vice president and secretary from each senatorial district. The temporary secretaries are also to be permanent.

A committee on resolutions, consisting of one member from each senatorial district, was then appointed.

The following gentleman were then placed in nomination for the office of State Treasurer and two ballots were had without result: P. A. Guthrie, Edward F. Kerr, Orange Noble, J. K. Bogert, J. M. Hackett, John S. Davis, D. C. Hissinger, H. B. Plummer, and J. H. Ross. The convention then adjourned until 8:30 in the evening.

Evening Session.

The convention re-assembled a few minutes after 8 o'clock and resumed balloting. The following names have been withdrawn: Newmyer after the first ballot, Hackett after the third, Ross after the fourth and Dissinger, fifth. At 11 o'clock the convention had taken eight ballots.

Noble Receives the Nomination.

On the ninth ballot quite a number of changes were made in rapid succession and when the vote was announced it stood as follows: Noble, 140; Davis, 94; Plumer, 4; Dill, 3. Mr. Hendrick moved to make the nomination unanimous and it was carried. The chair then declared Mr. Noble the nominee.

The report of the committee on rules came up for action, Mr. James of Northampton in the chair, and a lengthly discussion followed, which was still in progress at 1 o'clock.

The Convention Adjourns.

The rules were finally withdrawn by Hensel, their mover, after a tumultuous scene during which Hensel resumed the chair. The election of a chairman of the state central committee was proceeded with, resulting in the selection of Mr. J. K. Bogert, of Luzerne.

At 2 10 a. m. the convention adjourned.

The Platform.

The report from the committee on resolutions was then read and adopted, as follows:

Resolved, That we, the democratic party of Pennsylvania, in convention assembled, declare:

First—For the perservation of the constitution of the United States; home rule, freedom of election; for resistance to revolutionary changes, tending to consolidation or empire; against the election of any person to the presidency a third time; against the presence of troops at the polls; against the appropriation of public moneys for any purpose but the support of government; and class legislation, which despoils labor to build up monopoly.

Second—That the democratic party, as of old, favors a constitutional currency of gold and silver, in all forms, and coalition with repudiators merit the condemnation of honest people. The refusal of a republican administration to accede to the democratic demand for a further reduction in the rate of interest on the national debt subjects the government to a needless expense of a half a million dollars annually.

Third—In view of the exposure of extensive frauds in the postal and treasury departments under the last federal administration, the people demand prompt and unfaltering prosecution of the thieves; their successful operations prove that thre will be no real reform in the management of the departments of the federal government without a sweeping change therein. Sincere civil service reform will begin with a return to the Jeffersonian tests for office holders of honesty, capability and faithfulness to the constitution.

Fourth—That in the administration of the government of Pennsylvania the republican party has encouraged, practiced and shielded spoliation of the state treasury and misuse of the public funds, bribery of legislators, undue favor to corporations and monopolies, an unnecessarily high rate of interest on the state loans, a shameless prostitution of the pardoning power, a system of wholesale waste and peculation in the ordinary expenditures of the government, and an harassing and plundering exercise of municipal franchises and abuse of local trusts.

Fifth—That the arrogant, corrupt and personal domination controlling the republican party in this state, and suppressing honesty and independence in that organization, dictated the policy, the platform and the candidate of its last state convention. In view of these facts we hereby reaffirm the following resolution of the democratic state convention of 1879: "That the recent attempt under the personal direction of ruling republican leaders to debauch the legislature by wholesale bribery and corruption, and take from the commonwealth four millions of dollars, for which its liability had never been ascertained, is a fresh and alarming evidence of the aggressiveness of corporate power in collusion with political rings, and should receive the signal condemnation of the people at the polls.

Sixth—That the democratic party of Pennsylvania, regardful of the state's honor and its interests, pledges itself to the just application of the public moneys to the public service; to economy in governmental expenditures, that people may be lightly burdened and the purity of the administration preserved; to the abolition of all useless offices and the lopping off of all supernumary officials; to the lowest practicable rate of interest on state loans, without regard for the advantage of syndicates or speculators; to sleepless vigilance against the growth and exactions of monopolies; to watchful guard of the public interests against the pretensions of the great transporation companies to be above the fundamental law governing all else within the borders of state; to a vigorous collection of all the taxes lawfully laid upon corporation chartered or doing business in Pennsylvania; and to investigation into, correction of and punishment for the frauds and wastes which have for years permeated various departments of the state government under republican control.

Seventh—That no monopolies or exclusive right in the forces of nature, in grants of eminent domain, in the diffusion of information among the people by telegraph and associations for furnishing dispatches to the press, or grant of privileges affecting the daily business of the citizen can or ought rightfully to exist under our form of government. These are at all times to be subject to such legislative regulation and control as the rights and interests of the people demand.

Eighth—That the delegate power of congress to regulate commerce among the states and the reserved power of the states to regulate the same within their borders should be forthwith exercised to prevent unjust discrimination by common carriers against individuals and localities, and the provisions of the constitution of Pennsylvania relative to the exercised abuse of corporate franchise and duty of common carriers to the public should be enforced without delay by appropriate legislation.

Ninth—That all governmental power should be used in restraint of monopolies and not in aid of them and simple and speedy remedies should be provided by legislative enactment by which any citizen injured in his business may, in the state and federal courts, by one process of law, have quick, certain and adequate redress for corporate wrongs.

Tenth—That vested rights must be protected and respected, and great corporations waving between themselves to the injury of the public interest and their own shareholders must be regulated and controlled by wise and affective laws.

Eleventh—That franchises property of the people shall be granted and exercised solely for the public benefit, and subject to immediate and absolute forfeiter by due process of law when used for oppression or extortion, or when otherwise abused. No corporation can be above the people or the law. We thus reaffirm the ancient doctrines of the democratic party, and most cordially invite our fellow citizens of whatever party to join with us in carrying out the principles and policy we hereby announce, and to the advocacy of which we pledge ourselves until the right shall prevail.

Twelfth—That all good citizens, regardless of party affiliations sincerely mourn the death of President Garfield, and that we, as representatives of more than four hundred thousand democratic voters, express their individual and collective grief at the calamity which has befallen the republic, their sorrow and sympathy with the domestic affliction of the president's stricken household, and their execration of his assassin and of the murderer's foul crime.

An Omen of Victory.

From the Petroleum World (Ind.)

The nomination of Orange Noble, of Erie, for state treasurer by the democratic state convention, which met in Williamsport yesterday, is an unmistakable omen of party victory in November. Mr. Noble is by all odds the strongest candidate the democracy could have named for the position. He is, first of all, an honest, intelligent, upright man. He is indentified with no ring, clique or faction, and will enter the race free from all obligations save those which a true citizen acknowledges to himself and the people whom he represents.

He is an anti monopoly candidate, and appears before the voters of the state upon and out-and-out anti-monopoly platform. As against Baily, a man whose record and platform present no pledges against the monopolies, the patriotic independent voter will be prompt to express his preference for Orange Noble.

The democrats of Pennsylvania have done themselves proud. They have taken a long stride in advance of their republican brethren, and placed themselves squarely upon record upon the only real question before the country—that is, the people versus the monopolies. The record and character of the candidate are in full accord with the platform on which he stands. The action of the Williamsport convention reduces the ensuing canvass to a simple struggle between the monopolies and the people, and the democracy are on the right side.

Orange Noble will be the next state treasurer of Pennsylvania—mark that.

MR. THOMAS J. DUNKLE, our gentlemanly candidate for sheriff, is a man entirely competent and worthy for the position. A laboring man himself he is deseryedly popular with that large and respectable class who earn their daily bread by manual labor. He will fully appreciate the feelings of the unfortunate. A sheriff with humane and tender sympathies can often do very much to save from utter ruin those whom his unpleasant duty it becomes to sell out. and we feel convinced that Mr. Dunkle will act as gently with those in distress as he possibly can. He is possessed of a good practical education, has excellent business qualifications, and will make an efficient and popular officer.

—The party in this section of the country is solid for Mr. Dunkle and will give him a large, full vote.

Ohio has trumped up a claim of about $300,000 against the United States Government. We suggest that our Buckeye neighbors "take it out in trade"—such as Presidents, Generals, Chief Justices, Cabinet Officers, Foreign Ministerss, etc.

The Democratic State Convention did its work well. It made a Noble nomination for State Treasurer and placed him on a sound platform. With the bitter divisions and dissentions between the two wings of the Republican party there is every hope that our candidate will be elected.

The Democratic county ticket is a most excellent one throughout, but no man on it has better claims on the party than the nominee for register, James A. McClain, Esq. Mr. McClain possesses every necessary qualification for the important trust. He is a fine scholar, an expert pensman and a full-sized gentleman in every sense of the word Our citizens can rest assured that with Mr. McClain in the register's office their business will be well and faithfully attended to, and that executors, administrators and guardians will have an obliging and competent official to transact their business.

—Mrs. H. K. Luse left town last week on a prolonged visit to her parents in New Berlin and other friends in York.

—Wise men will already begin to gather up a fresh stock of patience and grace in order to have it available when stores must be moved and pipes "fixed."

—Our lady readers will be interested to know that Mrs. W. K. Alexander is in the city to buy a fall stock of bonnets and hats. Oh, the beautiful, lovely hats!

—Rev. C. Huber, of Limestoneville, Montour county, Pa., filled Pastor Tomlinson's pulpits on Saturday evening and Sunday. He preached most excellent sermons.

—This is fair week both at Lewisburg and Bellefonte. Some go to the one place and some to the other, but the majority of our people have neither time nor money to spare to go to either. Of course we go (rather stay) with the majority.

CORNER STONE LAYING.—The corner stone for the new Evangelical Lutheran Church at Millheim will be laid, D. V., on Sunday October 16th, proximo. Divine services begin on Saturday evening previous. Several visiting ministers will be present. The usual collections will be taken up. The christian public is cordially invited to attend.

JOHN TOMLINSON,
4t Pastor.

—Rev. A. K. L. Zimmerman, of Watsontown, Pa., preached visting sermons throughout Rebersburg (Lutheran) charge, last Sunday and was elected pastor by a nearly unanimous vote. It is hoped that he will accept.

—The legal vacation for those beautiful animals, the deer, is over, and you can see somebody equipped with rifle and knapsack, ready to make war upon them almost every day. Our Strasburg Nimrods, Dan and Pierce already brought a fine doe home on Saturday.

—Barber Springer is furnishing his barber shop in first class style, and if he keeps on a while yet at the same rate he will knock the spots off any similar establishment on Chestnut street or Broadway. Well, Jake can do it, for he makes more money than any other man in town.

—Mrs. Joseph Cantner sent us a red beet exactly twenty-two inches long, and of course thick in proportion. We have room in our cellar for at least 200 more like it. If we were a "Stalwart" we would call this an Arthur beat. But we are a Democrat and will therefore baptize it Hancock beat, as this name will please Mrs. Cantner much better.

—Dr. J. Jordan Deshler has not yet returned from his wedding trip. Of course, when a man of the doctor's means gets married it is entirely proper that he should take ample time and make a good, solid job of it. We have not learned the lucky bride's name—some say Campell, some have it something else—but that makes no material difference as her real name hereafter will be "Mrs. Doctor J. Jordan Deshler."

NOTICE.—The subscriptions to the Lutheran church at Millheim are now due. No doubt some of the contributors are ready to pay and it would be an accommodation if they would do so, as our building committee will soon have to make heavy payments.

—THE MILLHEIM MARBLE WORKS is one of the most flourishing mechanical establishments in Penn's Valley. For thirty-eight years it has enjoyed the confidence and patronage of the public and to-day stands as well in the estimation of our people as at any former period. The proprietors have uniformly adhered to one line of policy, namely to deal fairly and candidly with all customers. They keep the best stock of the several kinds of marble and never misrepresent quality or kind. Their work is always satisfactory and they have no quarrels with their patrons about accounts. In thirty-eight years they have collected but one single account by process of law. The Millheim Marble works is a good place to deal. You can do no better by getting monuments or head-stones for your departed friends anywhere else. tf

OUR BOYS.—O but we feel proud of the Millheim boys. Of course they are not as smart in some things as other boys, but in other directions they excel much. For example they don't know much about History, Geography or Grammar—and indeed what's the use bothering about such things—but they can run the streets later in the evening, make more noise, swear louder, exhibit ruder manners, stand around the corners on Sunday morning earlier than any sett of boys we know. And on extra occasions, such as a calathumpian serenade for a weddingthey are simply grand. An hour's notice is sufficient to bring fifty of them together, with horns, bells, horse fiddle, and every other imaginable thing to make an earthly pandemonium, and then—well we cannot do the boys full justice, and forbear. Of course such a high state of proficiency in these branches could not be acquired without careful and persistant parental training. That's what does it.

The following which we clip from the Philipsburg Journal is about as good a short sermon on the particular point as we have seen this long time. Hope it may do some good:

YOUR BOYS, PARENTS.—A few nights ago one of the merchant princes of Chicago, busy with his money-making, which kept him at his office until a late hour, was astounded to see his son, the pride of his palatial home staggering from a saloon with a company of roystering companions. His mind had been so continuously occupied with business that this accident was a revelation which spoke volumes of his neglect of his family. He could only lift this hands and exclaim: "Oh, my boy, where have you been tonight?" There are a multitude of parents in Philipsburg who might well repeat this question. The dens of vice are very alluring, and unless you throw around the boys and girls your strong arms of love, before you are aware they may pass beyond your reach and be overwhelmed in that vortex which snatches as eagerly and often as successfully, the brightest and best of the most luxurious homes as from mere humble abodes. Parents should know their children and seek to gain their confidence. They should know where and how they spend their evenings and leisure hours. They should know the literature they pursue, and the character of their associates; not spyingly but by the kind considerate means which every parent should study who has the care and guidance of children and young people. Study the happiness of home and the wants of the family more and money-making and fashion less, would be a good motto for a multitude of fathers and mothers.

The Pennsylvania Rail Road Company does more business now and makes more money than ever.

Various Cans

Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition—all operate to turn the hair gray, and either of them inclines it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR will restore faded or gray, light or red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it healthy action. It removes and cures dandruff and humors. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brashy, weak, or sickly hair, in which a few applications will produce a gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and nice in its operation, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts. It contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil or color white cambric; yet it lasts long on the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous.

News Miscellany.

SECULATIVE life insurance put to a practical test will be a failure, as everything based on a co-operative plan is, must be. That parties in high public and social standing set forth its claims to public confidence, makes it ten-fold more dangerous. What interest has any man in a subject eighty years old, unless it is an interest to have him die? Where old age should inspire respect and love, devilish cupidity awaits its end; where loving hands ought to minister to declining years and loving eyes flash affectionate greeting in the last moments, there waits at the bedside of death, the hungry speculator, to whom the death knell of the aged as it clangs out its tale of years is so much gain. The whole thing is a cold-blooded matter of business. From speculating upon the length of a man's life to wishing his death, from wishing to hasten it, are only steps in the downward career which men are liable to have. No civilization can stand this strain, and sooner or later there must be some legislation to stop insuring persons unless one has an insurable, not a speculative interest in their lives.—Ex.

Congressman COX writes of the Norwegians: "We see no beggary, no poorhouses or jails; we hear of no crimes or violence. No locks are needed upon doors. Drunkenness is rare. They love music and flowers, and are devoted to their faith and their families. They are never idle. Even the girls are knitting while attending sheep and cows."

Brutal Fun.

Birmingham (Ala.) Dispatch to Cincinnati Com

Business at Birmingham to-day was materially suspended in consequence of a proposed fight to be had at the park between two bull-dogs and a wildcat, weighing forty-seven and a half pounds, caught near here on Saturday. By 5 o'clock, the time announced for the fight to come off, 3,000 people had assembled and anxiously awaited the coming of the thrilling combat. The Mayor, however turned the dogs and cats loose promptly on time. The most desperate and savage fight occurred, lasting twenty minutes, when the cat had won the victory, having put out the eyes of both the dogs, and the excitement was over. The fight was of most intense character, every one rising to his feet and bursting out in a prolonged shout at the close. The owner has challenged a fight between the cat and any two dogs in the South for $1,000 a side.

London covers 700 square miles and has a population of 4,000,000, of whom 1,000,000 are foreigners. It is stated as a curious fact that it contains more Roman Catholics than Rome, more Jews than Palestine, more Irish than Dublin, more Scotchmen than Edinburgh, more Welshmen than Cardiff.

MARRIED.

On the 28th ult., at the residence of Mr. Wm. Laney, Lykens, Pa., by Rev. W. E. Lehman, Mr. Samuel K. Sankey, of Millheim, Pa., to Miss Minerva V. Shafer, of Clintondale, Pa.

On the evening of the 26th the happy couple had their wedding reception at the residence of the groom's parents, Millheim. The invited guests, besides the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sankey, were Mr. W. L. Musser & lady, Mr. S. G. Gutelius & lady, Mr S. D. Musser & lady, Mr. D. L. Zerby & lady, of Millheim, Mr. A. N Heckman & lady, of Clinton county, Mr. Jacob Grotzer & lady, of Eagleville, Mrs. L. D. Kuntz and Mrs. D. H. Lenker, of Aaronsburg, and Miss Sue Reighard, of Millinburg.

The Cornet Band discoursed its finest music, the beautiful bride and happy groom were in their rosiest humor, the guests all in good cheer and hilarity. All present were in the happiest mood.

At 8 o'clock the guests were seated to a sumptuous dinner, to which they did full justice. Then followed the members of the band, and the boys all gave full proof that they understand the absolute necessity of refreshing the inner man, after their professional work is over. Their frail bodies as well as their weak treasury were amply strengthened. Even the hundred and fifty big and little boys on the sidewalks and streets were not forgotton, but were made happy by a profusion of cigars and other luxuries. They had really done all they could to make the happy event memorable.

At a late hour the guests and band departed with their best wishes for the happiness of the newly married couple.

* *

On the evening of the 5th inst., at the residence of the bride's parents, Millheim, by Rev. P. C. Wehlemyer, Mr. James A. Keen to Miss Joanna H., eldest daughter of A. O. Deininger.

So goes the world, but "just as we expected" for some time past. But how delicate a job for us to write up the wedding, because, you know, we are so nearly in the "Freundshaft."

Well, then, to get a proper start, we wish the happy couple all possible bliss—indeed we do. May their journey over life's tempestous sea have few storms and much sunshine. May they together enjoy the highest measure of happiness a sinful world affords—together bear the sorrows and afflictions that are the common lot of us all. Especially do we charge our new nephew and cousin to take good care of Joanna, for she is worthy of the best and kindest treatment a wife can have. For several years she has been in our service in the Journal office and otherwise, and we cheerfully and squarely endorse her unblemished character, her industry and excellent domestic and social traits.

The wedding was a very enjoyable family festival, and we specially commend the absence of that rigid formality that so often destroys all real enjoyment on such occasions. "Gast," the new father-in-law, was in his best humor and felt even thicker than usual. For once we hope all our readers will believe us when we state that we appropriated our full share of the elegant dinner. The band did their level best—and when the boys do that their beautiful strains will charm and enchant even the prosiest soul

The bride was remembered with a few substantial presents.

Letter from Kansas.

Girard City, Oct. 1st, 1881.

MR. EDITOR:

No doubt many of my old friends in Penn's and Brush valleys would like to hear something of my trip to Kansas. I arrived here last Wednesday, Sept. 28th, at 4 P. M., somewhat fatigued with the long journey, having been two days and two nights on the way from Pittsburg. Girard is 125 miles from Kansas City, on the K. C., Ft. Scott & Gulf R. R. I can say but little of Kansas yet. We had a good deal of rain since I came to this place and I did not get out to see much. In the corn crop there is but little difference all along the route I traveled in Kansas. I think old Penn's valley has better corn than any I have seen since I left home. Old corn sells here at sixty cents per bushel and scarce at that. My best regards to all. JACOB WOLF.

AGRICULTURAL.

WHAT class or kind of horses to raise is a question for men to decide for themselves. Individual taste in such matters sometimes should govern. Some men delight in the stylish roadster, and another's idea of utility makes him admire the heavy breeds. The dratt horse is a necessity of the times, and the stylish stepper, the carriage horse and the fine saddle beast, will always be sought. If a man's tastes are in the direction of heavy horses, he should select them as his specialty, rather than undertake to raise light and speedy stock; and if another sees his ideal in the "thoroughbred" or blood horse, it is hardly to be supposed that he would take as much interest in raising draft stock as he would in breeding and raising his favorite kind. The demand for horses embraces all breeds, and as a rule, it is wise to select that class for which a man has a preference. In a large majority of instances, however, a man may not be wedded to any particular breed, or have no special preferance one over another, in such cases he cannot do better than to select as his specialty what has been called serviceable buisness horses, staunch, of good size and style, moderate speed, and nervy action. For horses of this class there is a steady and increasieg demand; they are quickly purchased at good prices, and it is in this field that farmers will find remunerative work. By a judicious selection of sire and dam such horses may be secured; but, as we have frequently urged, this cannot be done by indiscriminate breeding, for instead of obtaining what is desired, the progeny may be a nondescript, ungainly and undesirable. It is indispensable to success that the conditions shall be favorable to obtaining it. We have stated them heretofore, and need not repeat them here. The class of horses referred to are scarce and high, and of this many farmers have doubtless taken notice.

HORSE CRIBBING.—It frequently happens that a person has a very good horse otherways than this very pernicious habit of cribbing — or crib-biting — the cause of which is not very definitely settled by the books, as the veterinary practitioners, like all other doctors, disagree. Cribbing is said to be infectious, and a young horse standing in the next stall to an old cribber will be very likely to take on his propensity. The propensity, or habit, is very hard to cure. It may be avoided or palliated in some measure in several ways. The best way that I know of for the stable—having tried it myself—is to construct the stall in the following manner: Make the crib, or manger, on the floor instead of three feet higher up, with a plank front about fifteen inches high and for the bottom fit in a nice piece of hard-wood board, or plank. Have no bar or crosspiece at the bottom of the hay rack, but instead, flare off the ends of the slats and screw them on strong to the boarding in the front part of the stall. In this way the droppings will fall into the manger, and not be trodden under foot, and the horse will have nothing to bear his foreteeth upon to suck wind into or expell it from his stomach; both theories being advocated, both may be true. The oats can be fed out just as well as though the manger was higher up, and it is thought by many that this is the best and most natural way for a horse to feed. The horse should be hitched in front, over the manger, so that he can reach the food in all parts thereof, and that will give him scope enough to lie down comfortably.

HARDY WINDOW PLANTS.—There is no question more difficult to answer than as to the best plants for window culture, for so much depends on the skill or experience of the cultivator. Some growers will make things thrive that others fail utterly with; for some plants require nice care, while others thrive even under neglect. We give a list of plants that do not mind trifling checks. Tha various classes of geranium, such as the common Zonales, rose, and other scented leaved, and the common Lady Washington. Some of the hardier kinds of dwarf rose, Bengals and Bourbous, Chinese primroses, cyclaments, and the various kinds of Solanum, as the Jerusalem cherry, for instance, do very well. If there be a chance to trail from the boxes, the Kenilworth ivy, mignonette and the petunia will thrive, and if the parlor ivy, moneyworth, spiderwort, or running saxifrage, will be found very useful aed easily managed. If the boxes are in partial shade, palms ferns, and some of the variegated leaved begonias will do weli. If one become very successful with these easily grown plants, and become ambitious of floral success, there may be choicer plants experimented with.

HORSE diseases, like those which afflict the human family, are more likely to occur in low, cold, damp places than in those which are dry and warm. The best stables for horses are those situated on dry, gravelly soils with good natural drainage. Impure air is one of the strongest predisposing causes of disease. Horse stables should be kept clean, sweet and airy, and all affections of the lungs which will impair breathing and the proper aeration of the blood should be corrected. Impure water, spoiled and insufficient food should be guarded against.

HAND SCREEN.—Small circular hand screens are beautifully made of plaited cream lace on a stiff foundation, with a cluster of variegated flowers in the centre. they are used at teas, and also at the theatre.

Improved Hectograph.—The principle upon which the process depends is this, that a superficial tanning of the gelatin, in the gelatin-glycerin pad, makes the surface, wherever tanned or rendered insoluble, capable of taking fatty inks, while the rest of the surface rejects it. In practice then it is only necessary to have a perfectly level hectographic pad, to write the copy with ordinary nutgall ink, to which a little extra tannin and extract of logwood has been added, and to transfer the writing in the ordinary manner upon the hectographic surface. Wherever the writing appears, the surface becomes tanned, and on now applying a roller with printers' ink, the written characters alone take the latter. The pad is to be inked after each impression. It is said that 300 to 400 sharp copies can be made upon dry paper. The only material necessary, besides the hectograph, is a slab, or zinc plate, for spreading out the printer's ink, a small printers' roller with handle, and a roll of wood or paper for pressing the paper against the pad.

The London Times is responsible for the following piece of information: "Some time ago an Austrian chemist is said to have devised a new soporific, the action of which is so rapid and powerful that a few drops of it sprinkled on the head and face will effectually stupefy a man in a few seconds and render him utterly defenseless. He gave it the name of 'bandiger,' or tamer, and offered the secret of its preparation to the Austrian Government. But the Government has not only refused to purchase it, but has ordered the Police authorities to formally notify the inventor to discontinue his experiments, and to abstain utterly from using his invention in any way or communicating it to others, under pain of being criminally dealt with."

DOMESTIC.

BLACKBERRY CORDIAL.—The blackberry is said by chemists to have a remarkable effect as a tonic. Blackberry juice is recommended for nervous exhaustion. Put the Blackberries in a preserving kettle over the fire, mash them down with a wooden spoon as they heat until all the juice is boiled out. Strain through a cloth into a bowl; measure the juice. If you want to make plain syrup add one-fourth the quantity of good brandy to the juice and bottle. In cordial, allow two teaspoonfuls of ground cloves, ditto mace, ditto allspice, and four of cinnamon to each quart of the juice. Boil like simple syrup, skimming carefully. Add the spices after you have removed the scum, and boil again till syrupy. Strain out the spices through a fine muslin. When cold add a pint of whiskey to every puart of syruy. Bottle immediately and cork. If you use brandy for the cordial the proportion is one-fourth of your measure of the blackberry juice.

POINTS IN CAKE MAKING.—The butter should be perfectly sweet and free from buttermilk; the butter and sugar should be thoroughly beaten together. Powdered sugar is preferable to granulated, as the latter is slow in dissolving; the whites of the eggs should be beaten to a stiff froth, and added to the sugar, fruit should be rolled in flour and added at the last moment: Soda should be pulverized and sifted into the cake with the flour. The hand, or a wooden spoon, is best for mixing cake. An important point is the heat of the oven. The cake should begin to bake at once, but should not brown immediately. the oven door should be seldom opened while the cake is in. The gem-pans are excellent for baking cake, first heating them as for Graham gems.

WARM MILK AS A BEVERAGE.—Milk heated too much above 100 deg., F. loses for that time a degree of its sweetness and its density. No one who, fatigued by over-exertion of body or mind, has ever experienced the reviving influence of a tumbler of this beverage, heated as hot as it can be sipped, will willingly forego a resort to it because of its having been rendered somewhat less acceptable to the palate. The promptness with which its cordial influence is felt is indeed surprising. Some portion of it seems to be digested and appropriated almost immediately; and many who fancy that they need alcoholic stimulants when exhausted by fatigue will find in this simple draught an equivalent that shall be abundantly satisfying and more enduring in its effects.

THE cure for night sweats depends entirely on the cause. Malaria gives rise to them and then the cure is quinine and arsenic Debility may cause them. In that case tonics and good, nutritious food should be used. Consumption causes it, and the cure is sulphuric acid, ten to twenty drops in water, an hour. Oxide of zinc and hydrocyanite extract pills, and, above all, atrophia sulphate, one two hundredths of one grain to begin with. This must be taken with great care. Dr. Nairn, of London, says he sponges the body with tincture of belladonna, but the drug is too powerful to be used by any one but a physician.

RIBBONS which are very much soiled can be made clean, and will look almost like new ones, if washed in ammonia and water. Use half a teaspoonful of ammonia to one pint of water. Some ribbons, after washing or sponging, do not need to be ironed, and in fact are injured by it. These should be fastened to a table or long ironing board, and when perfectly smooth let them alone until they are dry. If they are all wrinkled when dry, lay a cloth which is slightly damp over them and press with a hot iron. Black silk, if sponged with cold coffee and ammonia, will be wonderfully freshened. Use a flannel cloth to remove dust from silk.

BUTTER SCOTCH.—Take three pounds of sugar, one-fourth of a pound of butter, one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar, and eight drops extract of lemon. Add as much cold water as will dissolve the sugar; boil without stirring till it will easily break when dropped into cold water, and when done add the lemon. Have a dripping pan well buttered, and pour in one-fourth of an inch thick, and when partly cold mark off in squares. If pulled when in this state till very white, it will be like ice cream candy. Do not stir it, but shake the vessel occasionally while cooking.

COTTAGE PUDDING.—Three pints of milk, four to six eggs, sugar to taste, two thick slices of bread crumbled very fine. Any kind of fruit may be added, and it is good without. Flavor to taste, and bake half an hour in a moderate oven. When baked beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth with a little sugar, and cover the top in large spoonfuls, and sprinkle with pink sugar sand; beat till a light brown. This is very delicate and handsome.

CARROT SALAD.—Select very tender carrots, and cook them in fast boiling water till tender; cut into very thin slices, put them into a glass salad bowl, and sprinkle with sifted loaf sugar; add the juice of a large fresh lemon, and a wineglassful of olive oil. By way of garnish, place round the margin of the dish an onion cut in exceedingly thin slices, and small bunches of any fresh, green salad leaves.

TO STOP BLEEDING OF THE NOSE.—A French surgeon says the simple elevation of a person's arm will stop bleeding at the nose. He explains the matter physiologically, and declares it a positive remedy. It is certainly easy of trial. Or, a strong solution of alum water, snuffed up the nostrils, will cure in most cases without anything further.

MUSTARD PLASTER.—By using syrup or molasses for mustard plasters, they will keep soft and flexible, and not dry up and become hard, as when mixed with water. A thin paper, or fine cloth should come between the plaster and the skin. The strength of the plaster is varied by the addition of more or less flour.

LIQUID SHOE POLISH.—The following is a German recipe: Dissolve three and a half ounces of shellac in a half pint of alcohol. Rub smooth twenty-five grains of lamp black with six drachms of cod-liver oil, and mix. A few drops are to be applied to the leather with a sponge.

CURE FOR HOARSENESS.—Take the whites of two eggs and beat them with two teaspoonfuls of white sugar, grate in a little nutmeg, then add a pint of luke warm water; stir well, drink often and it will cure the most obstinate case of hoarseness in a short time.

COOKS make the mistake of boiling things too much. After reaching the boiling point meats should simmer. The toughest meats can be made tender by so doing.

TO CURE WARTS.—Cut a slice from a raw potato and rub the hand each night; let the water dry on the hand. It will need but few applications.

A MEDICINE NOT A DRINK.

High Authority.

Hop Bitters is not, in any sense, an alcoholic beverage or liquor, and could not be sold, for use except to persons desirous of obtaining medical bitters.

GREEN B. RAUM.
U. S. Com'r Internal Rev.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24, 1879.

Dear Sir—Why don't you get a certificate from Col. W. H. W., of Baltimore, showing how he cured himself of drunkenness by the help of Hop Bitters. His is a wonderful case. He is well known in Rochester, N. Y., by all the drinking people there. He is known in this city, Cincinnati, New Orleans, New York; in fact, all over the country, as he has spent thousands of dollars for rum. I honestly believe his card would be worth thousands of dollars to you in this city and Baltimore alone, and make thousands of sober men by inducing the use of your Bitters.

J. A. W.

Milton, Del., Feb. 10, 1880.

Having used Hop Bitters, the noted remedy for debility, nervousness, indigestion, etc., I have no hesitation in saying that it is indeed an excellent medicine, and recommend it to any one as a truly tonic bitters. Respectfully,

REV. MRS. J. H. ELLGOOD.

I declined to insert your advertisement of Hop Bitters last year, because I then thought they might not be promotive of the cause of Temperance, but find they are, and a very valuable medicine, myself and wife having been greatly benefitted by them, and I take great pleasure in making them known.

REV. JOHN SEAMAN.
Editor Home Sentinel, Afton, N. Y.

Scipio, N. Y., Dec. 1, 1779.

I am the Pastor of the Baptist church here and an educated physician. I am not in practice, but am my sole family physician, and advise in many chronic cases. Over a year ago I recommended your Hop Bitters to my invalid wife, who has been under medical treatment of Albany's best physicians several years. She has been greatly benefitted and still uses the medicine. I believe she will become thoroughly cured of her various complicated diseases by their use. We both recommend them to our friends, many of whom have also been cured of their various ailments by them. REV. E. R. WARREN.

Cured of Drinking.

"A young friend of mine was cured of an insatiable thirst for liquor that had so prostrated his system that he was unable to do any business. He was entirely cured by the use of Hop Bitters. It allayed all that burning thirst; took away the appetite for liquor; made his nerves steady, and he has remained a sober and steady man for more than two years, and has no desire to return to his cups, and I know of a number of others that have been cured of drinking by it."—From a leading R. R. Official, Chicago, Ill.

Wicked for Clergymen.

"I believe it to be all wrong and even wicked for clergymen or other public men to be led into giving testimonials to quack doctors or vile stuff called medicines, but when a really meritorious article is made up of common valuable remedies known to all, and that all physicians use and trust in daily, we should freely commend it. I therefore cheerfully and heartily commend Hop Bitters for the good they have done me and my friends, firmly believing they have no equal for family use. I will not be without them. REV. ——,
Washington, D. C.

A good Baptist clergyman of Bergen, N Y., a strong temperance man, suffered with kidney trouble, neuralgia and dizziness almost to blindness, over two years after he was advised that Hop Bitters would cure him, because he was afraid of and prejudiced against the word "bitters." Since his cure he says none need fear but trust in Hop Bitters.

My wife and daughter were made healthy by the use of Hop Bitters and I recommend them to my people.—Methodist Clergyman Mexico, N. Y.

I had severe attacks of Gravel and Kidney trouble; was unable to get any medicine or doctor to cure me until I used Hop Bitters, and they cured me in a short time. —A distinguished lawyer and temperance orator of Wayne County, N. Y.,

WE have frequently read of a farmer who lost his watch while plowing, and turned it up with a plow several years afterward, and upon its being wound up it ran as well as ever. Such incidents are quite common. But here is a new version of the story. A man in Bridgeport dropped his watch down a well ten years ago, and last week, when the well was being cleaned, the time-piece was recovered—and still running. It appears that the chemical action of the limestone water on the governor of the watch had protected the safety-valve, and thus operated on the piston-rod causing the centrifugal force of the fly-wheel-to-to-well, we don't know the technical name for it, but that is what ailed the time-piece. And it was only a five dollar watch, too.

Wise Words of a Willing Witness.

At the close of a mass meeting, according to the report of the same published in a La Grange paper, reference was made to the phenomenal efficacy of St. Jacob's Oil in the many painful diseases to which mankind is subject. We refer to the above as showing how strong a hold the Old German Remedy for Rheumatism, has on the experience and good wishes of the great public,

AN old man, who claimed to be 97 years of age, and to have been turned out of doors by his son, drew a sympathetic crowd around him at the Central Market, recently.

"I don't know what is to become of me," he said in answer to a question. "I'm old, poor, weak and helpless."

"Oh, you're all right old man," remarked a bystander, as he came forward. "Can you walk as far as the City Hall?"

"I—I guess so."

"Well, go right up there and ask for the Board of Public Works. They'll put you on the street-cleaning force and keep you there till you are 150 years old."

"I don't believe I could do anything."

"Well, that's just the reason why you will get the job. Bruce up old man—twelve shillings a day ahead for you."

[Danville, (Ill.) News.]

John Stein, Esq., City Brewer, referring to its valuable qualities said to a News representative: I have used St. Jacob's Oil in my family and recommend it to my acquaintances. It has always given the best satisfaction, and is truly a wonderful remedy.

PROBABLY the boy never lived who, having a drum, did not burst it too see what made the music. But Vermont has the champion boy. He broke his drum because he wanted to see the drum core that his father spoke of.

WIT AND HUMOR.

THERE was only one passenger on board the ship, and the captain and mate contrived to get the most of the best of what was on the table. One day there was a rolypoly pudding with the sweetmeats in the middle. "Do you like puddin' ends, sir," asked the captain. "No, I don't like pudding ends, sir," said the passenger. "Well, me and my mate does," said the captain, cutting the pudding in two and putting one-half on the mate's plate and the other on his own. And the two soon made an end of both.

Bogus Certificates.

It is no vile drugged stuff, pretending to be made of wonderful foreign roots, barks, &c., and puffed by long bogus certificates of preteded miraculous cures, but a simple, pure, effective medicine, made of well known valuable remedies, that furnishes its own certificates by its cures. We refer to Hop Bitters, the purest and best of medicines.—Exchange.

"I DECLARE, if there isn't the deacon's daughter out with a bran new shawl. Well, I never," "Hush!" said a better informed female; "tisn't hers. It's one she borrowed from the company that's visiting over t' the deacon's." "Well, there's one thing I know. She can't depend on borrowing to look well in heaven. She'll have to wear her own angel plumes when she gets there." And they bowed their heads as the minister opened the services.

"You mistake," said the hackman; "this is not money, it is a check." "Go a way wid yez," cried Pat; "isn't a check always writ on papper? Did yez take me for a greenhorn altogither?"

In our endeavors to preserve health it is of the utmost importance that we keep the secretory system in perfect condition. The well known remedy Kidney-Wort, has specific action on the kidneys, liver and bowels. Use it instead of dosing with vile bitters or drastic pills. It is purely vegetable, and is prompt but mild in action. It is prepared in both dry and liquid form and sold by druggists everywhere. —Reading Eagle.

THIS is the way a Vassar girl tells a joke, "Oh, girls! I heard just the best thing to-day. It was so funny. I can't remember how it came about, but one of the girls said to Professor Mitchell—oh, dear, I can't remember just what she said; but Professor Mitchell's answer was just too funny for any use; I forget just exactly what he said, but it was too good for anything!"

"IF any one attempts to pull my ears," said Joe Cook, "he will have his hands full." The audience looked at the great defamer's ears and snickered.

THE married daughter of a contracter comes to visit her father and on going out with him for a walk to the scene of his latest labors burst out ecstatically.

"Oh, pa, what lovely houses those are that you have been building—those cottages along the bank of the river. I have an awful great mind to take one and bring the children here and spend the summer near you."

The contractor (deeply affected)—"No, no, my child! Never! Not that I would not fain have you near me every day and hour, but, darling, those villas were not built to live in—they were built to sell."

AT a recent examination in a girls' school the question was put to a class of little ones: "Who makes the laws of our Government?" "Congress," was the ready reply. "How is Congress divided?" was the next question. A little girl in the class raised her hand. "Well," said the examiner. "Miss Sallie, what do you say the answer is?" Instantly with an air of confidence as well as triumph, the answer came: "Civilized, half civilized and savage."

Set back 42 Years.

"I was troubled for many years with Kidney Complaint, Gravel, &c.; my blood became thin; I was dull and inactive: could hardly crawl; was an old worn out man all over; could get nothing to help me, until I got Hop Bitters, and now I am a boy again. My blood and kidneys are all right and I am as active as a man of 30, although I am 72, and I have no doubt it will do as well for others of my age. It is worth a trial.—(Father)

A HUMORIST, embittered by long manufacture of jokes and the fiendish pursuit of puns, once impaled a baleful joke upon his wife at the close of a washday, she then preparing the frugal evening meal, whereupon she smote him over his broad brow with a stewpan. The dying man cried out as he fell, with a gleam of immortal triumph in his eyes, "Stewpandious joke!" and passed away to a brighter land.

ONE of the newest agonies of this intense age is for a young gentleman to send to his adored and adorable a large-sized Japanese parasol covered with those rapturious pastoral decorations so common to Japanese high art. This signifies "Shall I sit in the shade with you this afternoon?" And she generally does.

How to Get Well.

Thousands of persons are constantly troubled with a combination of diseases. Diseased kidneys and costive bowels are their tormentors. They should know that Kidney-Wort acts on these organs at the same time, causing them to throw off the poisons that have clogged them, and so renewing the whole man. Hundreds testify to this.—Pittsburgh Post.

Regulate the Secretions.

MRS. JONES went to a picnic the other day, one of those quiet picnics with no fuss, where you get up at 4 o'clock in the morning, pack off four children and ten lunch baskets and gad around in the heat all day—and it made Mrs. Jones so tired that she had to do two days' washing before she felt rested.

SOMETHING WORTH LOOKING AT.—Aged party: "As you say, miss, I ham indeed a-gettin' werry old, and I 'ave a-seen a many things in my time christenings, funerals and weddins—but there is one thing as I've never seen as I should like to afore I die." A SEASIDE WONDER:—Bright red silk leggins are used at some of the seaside resorts to protect the limbs of bathers from gnats. A rural visitor wrote home his impression of the spectacle in these words. "It beats all to see folks here going in water so hot that it scalds their legs."

Recent investigations respecting the chemical constituents of tobacco fumes, says the Maryland Medical Journal, confirm the olden view of the presence of nicotine. It has, however, been ascertained that nicotine appears mostly in the form of salts having picoline for their base. Other substances of a similar composition are generated in the act of smoking, which seem to form under the influence of the varying quantity of water in the tobacco and its mode of combustion. Thus the use of the pipe develops the highly diffusable and narcotic pyridin, while cigar-smoking gives rise to larger quantities of colidin. There exists only one remedy for the remedy for the cure of chronic tobacco poisoning, but that is so prompt and efficacious that none other is needed. Unfortunately there exists also a very great and frequently an insurmountable prejudice among smokers against its employment. It is the abstinence from tobacco.
